- Vedic Period: The Vedic texts, which are among the oldest scriptures in Hinduism, date back to approximately 1500-500 BCE. Concepts of non-binary gender and LGBTQ identities are mentioned in various Hindu scriptures, including references to deities like  Ardhanarishvara   ॐ देवी स्कन्दमातायै नमः     (a composite form of Shiva and Parvati, representing both masculine and feminine energies).
- Ardhanarishvara: The concept of Ardhanarishvara, which symbolizes the unity of male and female principles, is found in texts like the Shiva Purana and Skanda Purana, which date to around 300 BCE to 500 CE. However, the concept likely has roots that go back even earlier, considering the symbolic representation in Hinduism's broader cultural and religious practices. [\[9\]](#)

If you know nothing about the Upanishads/Vedic Origins/philosophy and ethics, the single-best Vedic movie I can suggest is Monkey Man     - It's the equivalent as "Vedic Fight Club".

It touches on Samsara      , LGBTQ+Rights and shows a stark contrast to how their Caste system is a tool for oppression as capitalism is in the USA.

The movie (And person) Oppenheimer uses Ancient Vedic Wisdom.
He mentions the Bhagavad Gita - Wikipedia, He also learned SANSKRIT IN A WEEK!

Even StarWars uses the Gita, in the first trilogy - you see the exact same scene playout between the gungans and separatists.

Are we human? What is human? Different DNA? Different faces? Different languages? Different places? A cat can have almost all the same mental illnesses/feelings that a human does, so a cat is no different than a pig/chicken/cow or bird. So what is human? Intelligence? Just because something can't speak a language you understand doesn't mean it lacks intelligence. Emotional Wisdom isn't tied to intelligence either. So what is human? One that can produce wealth? Even a chicken can produce wealth. So what is human? One that can mourn the loss of love, even birds have death-rituals. So what is human? Someone that can see patterns? Even nature works in patterns of Fibonacci. So what is human?
